Page 3 1 MR. BENTLEY: Okay. Why don't 2 we get started and I will start by 3 making sure a few people are on the call. I think, I won't go through 4 necessarily everybody from the Weil and 5 6 Evercore teams that are on the call, I 7 think for the court reporter from 8 Veritext, I will note the people that It will likely just be me 9 may talk. 10 and the Special Master, Bob Pincus, but 11 just to be sure, I'm also joined by 12 Matt Barr and Jared Friedmann from 13 Weil, on the Evercore side we should 14 have one or more of Will Hiltz, David 15 Ying and Ray Strong, and Bob Pincus, 16 Bob, if you could just confirm that 17 you're on the call, I just want to make 18 sure. MR. PINCUS: I'm on the call. 19 20 Thank you. 21 MR. BENTLEY: Great. Judge 22 Stark, do you have Michael Esposito, 23 your clerk, with you? Michael, are you 24 on the line? 25 THE COURT: Mike, are you

Page 4 1 there? 2 MR. ESPOSITO: I'm here, yeah. 3 MR. BENTLEY: Great. I'm 4 sorry, I should also say that we have Malisa Dang from Potter Anderson, our 5 local counsel, on the line as well. 6 7 So why don't we get started 8 since we are the ones that requested 9 the meeting. I will start by giving, 10 Judge, a very brief high-level overview 11 of the unsolicited bid that came in 12 late on Friday night and then we can 13 move into, you know, what the Special 14 Master is requesting at least on 15 today's ex parte conference. 16 So, first, the bid, this bidder 17 is our Bidder A -- sorry, I'm getting a 18 little background noise. I don't know 19 if somebody is outside or something. I 20 apologize. 21 THE COURT: If everyone can put 22 themselves on mute. I will do that as 23 well. 24 MR. BENTLEY: Sorry, where I 25 started was the bidder that submitted the unsolicited proposal on Friday night is a bidder that's been involved in the process throughout and submitted a topping bid, and during the topping round I believe we denoted them as Bidder A.

Bidder A, at the time they submitted their topping bid on June 18th, I believe their recommendation, we categorized it as a nonconforming bid because that bid at that time contemplated or was conditioned on receiving, you know, executed sign-off from both the 2020s for the 2020s TSA and also one or more additional judgment creditors. They ultimately did not, you know, get those deals executed during the topping period or the few days following the expiration of the topping period, and it seems as though they just got those consents and those agreements as of Friday.

So they have submitted that updated bid and it seems as though based on the letter that they have sent to us and the documentation that they have sent to us that they surpassed the headline price in terms of what they were aiming to achieve during the topping period, they have since surpassed that.

Just to put some numbers on it, their bid has a deal with the 2020s, as I mentioned, where they are proposing to pay the 2020s then in terms of distribution of consideration to the holders of attached judgment, it is a mix of cash and noncash that would satisfy approximately 5.9 billion in judgments.

Again, some of those judgments are receiving, or, excuse me, judgment holders are receiving noncash consideration. It appears as though all of those receiving noncash consideration have executed some form of letter agreement with Bidder A documenting the fact that they would discharge their claim in exchange for the noncash consideration.

Just to be clear, and as is the case I think with the Gold Reserve Dalinar bid that has been recommended and with other bids during the topping period, many times when a claimant is agreeing to discharge its judgment in favor of receiving noncash consideration it is not necessarily that it is a one-to-one exchange of consideration. Oftentimes they are taking cents on the dollar to discharge the claim.

unsolicited bid coming in at 5.9, that puts it approximately 1.48 billion or 1.49 billion below the Dalinar bid.

Just to talk in terms of like the waterfall itself, if you recall the Dalinar bid paid all the way through Siemens in the judgment waterfall.

This unsolicited bid from Bidder A would pay through Koch. So the difference that we are talking about is the roughly 1.49 billion that is made up of the Gold Reserve claim and the Siemens claim.

I will pause there because I think that is probably the most important part or at least the economics of the proposed bid.

Obviously there is a lot to dig in on documentation if we are given the authority to do so. But I will pause there in case, your Honor, you have any questions on the economics of the bid or understanding what the structure is vis-a-vis Bidder A and Dalinar.

THE COURT: Thank you. I think I understand it. Unfortunately I'm having a little bit of trouble with my phone, so a little bit dropped out.
Importantly, the 5.9 billion cash, I heard that once. Did you say that twice?

MR. BENTLEY: So the 5.9 billion is a mix of cash and noncash, but what I was saying is the 5.9 just reflects the amount of judgments that would receive distributions from this Bidder A unsolicited proposal. So some of those judgment creditors will receive noncash consideration.

THE COURT: Okay. I was just trying to figure out if something important dropped out when you were first describing what Bidder A said. I heard you say that they had reached a deal with the 2020s and mentioned the cash component could equal up to the 5.9, if you mentioned in that context, I didn't hear it. I'm just trying to figure out if I missed anything.

MR. BENTLEY: No, no, I didn't mention it. From the Special Master's view, as long as the noncash is consented to, then the noncash is just as good as cash as long as it is discharging the claim and it is on a consensual basis.

THE COURT: Good. Then I don't think, if I missed a word here or there, I don't think I missed anything substantive. Just to say it back to you, you got this unsolicited bid

Friday, it is Bidder A, that you have dealt with before, and it would involve a resolution with the 2020s but it ends up approximately 1 and a half billion dollars less in total compensation, and then the point that you ended on, and I guess this may be a question, it would pay through in the waterfall all of the same parties that the current Dalinar offer does except not Gold Reserve and Siemens and any other member of the Dalinar consortium, do I have that correct?

MR. BENTLEY: Up until the last point, yes. So it does propose to pay certain members of the Dalinar consortium. Just to rehash, the Dalinar consortium is comprised of the Gold Reserve, Rusoro, Koch, and Siemens. This bid -- and maybe I should reiterate those in the order of their priority in the waterfall. So the Gold Reserve consortium, or the Dalinar consortium, is comprised of, starting at the most senior, Rusoro, Koch, Gold Reserve, and Siemens. This unsolicited Bidder A proposal does have deals struck with Rusoro and Koch. It does not have deals struck to our knowledge with Gold Reserve and/or Siemens.

THE COURT: Got it, okay.

Thank you for that. I think I'm caught up. You go ahead.

MR. BENTLEY: Okay. So we wanted to request this ex parte meeting just in the interest of time because we have the sale hearing starting on Monday and wanted to be able to talk through live with you any questions or reactions you might have on our request to engage with this bidder. I'm happy to go into, you know, what we are hoping to get out of the engagement with the bidder, next steps, any of that, whatever would be most helpful for you.

THE COURT: Yeah. I will be fine with just a brief overview of that. But the request at the end of the day is can you engage with them and presumably they would want access to the data room; is that right?

MR. BENTLEY: Presumably. Ι mean, they have not asked for it yet. They didn't ask for it in submission of their bid, or, sorry, their unsolicited proposal, but I would expect that as soon as we start talking with them they are going to want to understand any additional information that has been uploaded to the data room, including the financial forecasts and performance So similar to the last and whatnot. unsolicited proposal, yes, I would suggest that while we're on the phone, that is going to be a part of our request now.

THE COURT: And do you propose, and remind me what the sale procedure order would require, do you propose to let the sale process parties and the Dalinar consortium know about this?

MR. BENTLEY: We already have. So we have provided the sale process parties with the bid letter, unredacted bid letter that we received on Friday night, and we notified Dalinar pursuant to the SPA that we had received an unsolicited proposal. In the event after engaging with the bidders, if your Honor approves that, if ultimately the Special Master determines that this was a superior proposal to the Dalinar transaction, Dalinar, we would have to provide notice to Dalinar and then Dalinar would have the opportunity to match this proposal. So before we can officially terminate the Dalinar SPA, we would have to go through those steps.

THE COURT: And does the sale procedure order give Dalinar in that circumstance a certain amount of time to top it or match it?

MR. BENTLEY: Yes, it is in their SPA. I cannot recall exactly off the top of my head, but I think it is something in the range of two or three days. I know that it is a very short period of time. It is prescribed in their SPA.

THE COURT: Okay, understood.

Yeah, why don't you just give me the brief overview as to what you anticipate would happen and then just make it as concrete as you can what you are asking me for.

MR. BENTLEY: So I think Sure. that what we would seek to engage with the bidder on is the terms and conditions proposed in their SPA. their bid letter that we received they referred to a prior iteration of the SPA markup that they submitted to us, so I think that we've got some work to do on that in terms of getting back to the issues with them and trying to get an updated SPA in the event that we felt there was or the Special Master thought that there was a viable path to this becoming a superior proposal.

We need to understand better the terms and conditions related to their TSA with the 2020s and then also we would like to understand whether the bidder has engaged with any other additional judgment creditors beyond what is reflected in the waterfall in their letter. More specifically, I think we're interested in understanding whether they have engaged with Gold Reserve and/or Siemens to offer them any consideration, just, you know, being conscious of the fact that the existing recommended bid does pay Gold Reserve and Siemens something.

So those are I think, based on an initial review of the documentation that we received, those are the areas that we will be focused on. I think that we are very conscious of the timeline with the sale hearing proposed to be starting on Monday and so we would, as soon as we get off the phone with you, if we have authority to engage with the bidder, we will go do that and try to work to a spot as soon as possible, you know, in the next couple of days, work to a spot as to whether the Special Master thinks that it still makes sense to start the sale hearing on Monday or if he would be recommending to your Honor that it be adjourned, including, for example, to let Bidder A engage with Gold Reserve and Siemens, if they haven't, or if we still need time to better understand their bid, any number of factors that we discuss with them.

I think that we still have yet to talk to the sale process parties about this bid. We have sent the bid letter to them, but I expect that we are going to have a phone call with them tonight and I wouldn't be surprised -- we wouldn't be surprised if some or all of the sale process parties propose adjourning the sale hearing to let this play out, the duration of which I don't think that we can really say with any specificity now, and, again, the Special Master, together with his advisors, will be talking around the clock over the next day or two with the goal of coming back to the Court and also to the parties if we believe we are in a situation where it would be value maximizing to postpone the sale hearing at all.

THE COURT: That is helpful to understand. If I'm not mistaken, the status report about what the hearing might look like is due today; is that correct?

MR. BENTLEY: Yes, that's correct. And we have been engaging with the sale process parties and the initial judgment creditors as well as the 2020s over the last several days and we are proposing to still be on track to file that this afternoon. don't think that that agenda that we lay out there will necessarily be impacted even if you are ultimately to recommend an adjournment of the sale It may be if the Special hearing. Master were to change his recommendation, the witness list and other matters might change slightly, but for the most part I think that the agenda that we will be laying out in the status report later today should still remain in place.

THE COURT: And I take it unless and until you ask for something further than what you are asking for today, your view would be to let the briefing, the last two rounds of briefing just continue along the track it is on, which I think is to be completed by Saturday?

MR. BENTLEY: Correct, yes. As of today, as we are speaking to you now, we don't have any reason, any concrete reason to request that the timing, whether the briefing or commencement of the sale hearing, change at all. Our goal is to come to a more developed view on that vis-a-vis this unsolicited bid in the next couple of days because we want to make sure, you know, a lot of people are traveling and preparing and a lot of time and money being incurred to start the hearing on the 18th, and so we just want to be respectful of everybody's time.

THE COURT: Okay. Anything else you want to add before I would say to you put to me as direct a request as you can so I can approve it or not?

MR. BENTLEY: Yes, okay.

Nothing else that we would like to add.

So the simplified request was the Special Master would like authority from the Court to engage with Bidder A with respect to its unsolicited proposal submitted on this past Friday. It would also like authority to regrant or reopen access to the data room to Bidder A.

THE COURT: Okay. I do grant you, technically the Special Master, I grant the authority to do as you requested, to engage with Bidder A in connection with the unsolicited offer submitted on Friday and, if necessary, that would include the authority to reopen the data room subject to all the conditions, the confidentiality and all that you have been proceeding consistently through all this time.

I would also -- and, I mean, I don't think I need to make any more record of the reasoning. I think you have set it out and it is consistent with our ongoing efforts to pursue a value maximizing transaction.

I would say my recollection is we have a call I think scheduled for Wednesday which is intended to discuss whatever I see in the status report later today and nail down the proceedings of the sale hearing for Monday. I recognize it is a fluid situation. You know how to reach out to me through Michael. Don't hesitate anytime day or night to try to reach us. We will be as responsive as we can be.

But my current intent would be, especially if we don't hear anything further from you, is we will go forward Wednesday, but it would be helpful unless there is some reason not to do so, i.e. confidentiality of some sort that I'm not thinking of off the top of my head, it would be helpful if you are prepared no later than that call to give an update, because, as you say, about this situation we are discussing, because people are spending money and making plans, and I'm not saying that I wouldn't let the uncertainty play out through as late as Monday, as to whether or not we are having a hearing Monday, but if you have a sense on Wednesday as to whether you think Monday is still the best time to get together or not, I and others will be interested in having your view on that. Understood?

MR. BENTLEY: Yes, completely understood. Thank you for the color.

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. PINCUS: Thank you very much, your Honor.

Page 5 1 PROCEEDINGS THE REPORTER: We're on the record at 2 1:49. 3 4 MR. BENTLEY: Great. Thank you. 5 Your Honor, we'd like to start -- I'll 6 give you a high-level preview of the topics that we'd 7 like to cover. For the most part, there's just three The first and the most time pressing, I'll 8 say, is the status conference adjournment, which we 10 previewed for you overnight. And we filed a letter on 11 the docket this morning requesting that today's status 12 conference be postponed. And we saw that you also 13 entered an order confirming that and directing us to 14 file an updated status report on next steps by 15 tomorrow. 16 So we have been talking with the sale 17 process parties. We've been talking with the bidders. 18 We've been talking with all other additional judgment 19 creditors trying to coalesce around next steps. 20 part, that's resulted in this request for an ex parte 21 meeting with you to preview what we view as the 22 options for the next steps. So after we have this ex 23 parte meeting and after getting Your Honor's guidance 24 on next steps with respect to both the status conference and to the sale hearing, we will go meet 25 and confer with parties and submit that status report tomorrow.

You'll note in the letter that we filed this morning, one of the reasons why we requested the adjournment was because of Red Tree's letter that they filed last night. I'm sorry, I don't have the docket number handy. But I know that we had referenced it in our letter. In Red Tree's letter responding on top of the status report regarding the status conference, they noted that a bid had come in from Amber Energy. And they also noted the value of that bid.

Honor, we told you that an unsolicited bid came in.
We didn't tell you who had submitted it, and we told you, generally speaking, what the value was and the fact that they're -- that they had a deal with the 2020s. We can confirm that it is Amber Energy that submitted that bid. We had not made a public disclosure about that because the Special Master is evaluating whether that transaction would be deemed to be superior to the existing recommended Dalinar transaction.

The intention was to file that redacted version of that bid in short order with a decision.

However, I should note that the decision as to whether it's a superior proposal has not been made -- has not been made yet, I should say. So the Red Tree letter, I think in our view, threatened to convert the status conference from what is a -- or what was supposed to be mostly a procedural status conference to discuss the agenda and the schedule for the hearing, you know, when experts and witnesses were going to be -- were going to have direct and cross and then, also whether and how much of the opening and closing arguments we would have. And because this issue was put at play in the Red Tree letter, in our view, the status conference was likely to turn into a finger-pointing exercise and a discussion of a bid that had not yet been made public and, unfortunately, probably would have gotten sidetracked.

So I think a couple things just to say about Red Tree's disclosure of the information. The Special Master did not tell Red Tree that Amber Energy had submitted a bid or had said what the value of the bid was or any other terms about that bid. We had only divulged that to the sale process parties, and we had told Dalinar as the existing recommended bidder that an unsolicited competing proposal had come in.

And we know that Dalinar knew that it was Amber Energy because we had encouraged Amber Energy to reach out to

Dalinar, to Gold Reserve, and also to Siemens to discuss potentially folding them into the Amber Energy bid.

So we don't know who provided the information to Red Tree. It could have been Amber Energy itself. It could have been any of the sale process parties. It could have been Gold Reserve. I don't think that now we are levying any kind of opinion on who we think it is, just the mere fact that we didn't provide that information to Red Tree. So we don't want it to be inferred or suggested that Red Tree breached some sort of confidentiality obligation they had with the Special Master. That's not possible because we never talked about the Amber Energy bid with them.

So notwithstanding that Red Tree didn't breach the confidentiality obligations to the special master, the fact that the bid was out there and somebody must have breached some confidentiality obligations or otherwise consented to the bid going public happened. And it happened in a manner that, you know, we were not anticipating. I think that we've tried to be measured in the way that we provide information to the public and do so, you know, with a message attached to it. Whereas the disclosure here was, you know, was done, you know, outside of the process, I'll say.

So given all of that, we think that it was best to postpone or adjourn the status conference. And we recognize that obviously the status conference will have to, you know, by definition it'll have to be put back on at some point when the schedule for the hearing and the commencement of the hearing -- or I should say the commencement date of the hearing is decided. And that's the, you know, the last topic that we want to talk about today.

So I'll pause there and if you don't have any questions, I think that's all we were going to say about the status conference itself. And if no questions, then I'll move on to the next topic.

THE COURT: A couple things. First, you may have seen in the order I did reschedule a status conference for Friday morning. So as of now, your status report is due tomorrow and then any responses tomorrow night. And status conference for Friday, obviously subject to whatever developments or further orders may come. But as of now, that's on the calendar.

And second, and maybe you will come back to this, but I'm not at all inquiring at this Page 10 point whether the Special Master is likely to deem the Amber bid to be a superior bid. But I am curious about any estimate as to the timing as to which the decision may be forthcoming as to whether or not it is a superior bid. Is there anything you want to say about that? MR. BENTLEY: Yes. I think that that will be answered in the third topic I wanted to cover, which is the options on the hearing schedule. So if you don't mind, then I'll cover it there. THE COURT: That's fine. That was all I had for now. MR. BENTLEY: Great. And apologies on the first point. Yes. I should have acknowledged that we did see that you rescheduled for the status conference for Friday. That slipped my mind when I was reciting the facts. THE COURT: I'm sure there's a lot of moving parts on your end. No problem. MR. BENTLEY: Yes. Don't have the time -- or I should say didn't have the time to prepare for this ex parte meeting as I usually do. You know, we've been on phone calls around the clock with the dozen or so parties. Okay. So the next topic that I want to cover is setting the stage a bit for the bids on the table. And just so that you understand kind of the predicate for when we talk about the next topic, which is -- or I should say the last topic, which is the hearing schedule. And I think that laying out the bids that we have in front of us now will help to put all of that in context.

So first, we, of course, have the recommended Dalinar transaction. As a reminder, that transaction proposes to deliver approximately $7.38 billion to judgment creditors in the form of cash and non-cash consideration. It is similar to the Dalinar stalking horse bid, meaning both -- or I should say neither of those proposed transactions contemplate a settlement with the PDVSA 2020 bond holders. And so that transaction was recommended, I believe, on July 2nd. And that's what we've been conducting briefing related to, depositions related to, and parties have put forth, you know, their experts both in support and against that transaction.

And then the second bid, I will say -we'll go to the Amber Energy bid next because I think that one has become the topic du jour, you know, given the Red Tree letter last night and given our ex parte earlier this week. So Amber Energy did submit a bid during the stalking horse round and during the topping bid round.

If you recall, in the final recommendation, we described the collective bids as there being only Dalinar and Red Tree as conforming, and the others as non-conforming. We can confirm that, you know, two of the bidders that we have in play today that have submitted updated bids, that the unsolicited competing proposals are Bidder A and Bidder B from the topping round. So that means that Amber Energy submitted what we deemed to be a non-conforming bid during the topping round.

They were denoted as Bidder A during the topping round. The reason that they were non-conforming at the time was because their transaction relied upon a settlement with the 2020 bond holders, which at the time of submission of their topping bid, they did not have. Today, you know, as we described to you on Monday when we were requesting your authority to engage with Bidder A, they do have that executed settlement agreement with -- or I should say, support agreement with the 2020 bond holders.

And also, since submitting their topping bid -- which I'll remind you that the topping bid was $25 million above the Red Tree stalking horse

1	bid. Since then, they have incorporated agreements
2	from the next I think there's unless it's you,
3	Judge Stark. If it's somebody else that has the
4	ambulance in the background, I'd ask you to go on
5	mute.
6	THE COURT: Yeah. I think it's here in
7	D.C.
8	MR. BENTLEY: Okay. Well, that's okay
9	then.
10	THE COURT: Yeah. Hopefully it'll
11	pass.
12	MR. BENTLEY: We'll let it whine on. I
13	work in New York City, so you know, it's the
14	equivalent of birds out in the country.
15	So I'll pick up where I left off. The
16	Amber Energy bid, you know, as compared to the bid
17	that they submitted in the topping round, the topping
18	round is $25 million above the Red Tree stalking horse
19	bid. They now have secured agreements from the next
20	three creditors in line, which are Rusoro, Conoco,
21	which has their small 48 to $50 million claim, and
22	then Koch.
23	So that means that Amber Energy has
24	executed support agreements from those three parties
25	to the extent that they're receiving non-cash

consideration. I'm trying to recall off the top of my head, but the Conoco claim in the middle there may actually just be getting cash. So there may not be an executed agreement with them. So that brings the Amber Energy bid to, you know, approximately 5.8 or $5.9 billion in proceeds delivered to the -- excuse me, to the waterfall creditors, to the attached judgment creditors.

And also, at a settlement with the 2020s that contemplates paying the 2020s that will become relevant later in the conversation that I'll say about the Amber Energy settlement with the 2020s is that in the event the Special Master recommended the Amber Energy transaction to the court as a superior proposal and as what is effectively a replacement final recommendation, there is a term in their settlement agreement, their support agreement with the 2020s that requires the 2020s -- or the 2020s agree to go and seek a stay of the New York action.

So they essentially would, you know, file a motion in front of Judge Failla in New York and request that she not enter a decision on a summary judgment, which she has said in that July 10th status conference that she anticipates issuing in September or by the end of September. Now, obviously, depending on the timing of the hearing, depending on, you know, a number of other factors, you know, responses to that motion that the 2020s file, et cetera, that Judge Failla may or may not grant that motion to stay the New York action. But, you know, I think that's just an important data point. And again, we'll come back to that when we talk about the hearing schedule.

And then the third bid that we have in front of us is the June 30th unsolicited competing bid from Bidder B, which on July 1st we received your authority to engage with Bidder B with respect to that June 30th bid. The June 30th bid -- we also filed a notice, I should say, and made that bid public, you know, with applicable redactions, I believe it was last week, in connection with filing our reply brief.

of the last week is that Bidder B's proposal

What we've learned in over the course

Page 17 1 is okay. And that is, you know, from what we can recall, compliant with all the bid procedures. 2 3 And the other point that is similar 4 between the two of them is that we would still need to 5 finalize a stock purchase agreement with each of those two bidders, Amber Energy and Bidder B. 6 7 8 Those are the three bids on the table. 9 10 I'm happy to answer any questions about the summary of 11 the bids, but I just wanted to provide that as some 12 context for, you know, our next topic, which is 13 talking about the scheduling of the sale hearing and 14 what we view as the options for scheduling. 15 THE COURT: Right. The only question I 16 have at this point with respect to Bidder B, if I 17 understand it correctly, the bid that you believe is on the table or imminently on the table from them is 18 19 20 21 22 23 MR. BENTLEY: 24 25

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. BENTLEY: And I think importantly, you know, for comparison purposes to the existing recommended bid of Dalinar, Dalinar pays through Siemens. So in the waterfall, once you get to Koch, the next two judgment creditors are first, Gold Reserve and then, Siemens.

And I think that, you know, in going back and forth with all of the bidders, you know, encouraging Amber Energy and Bidder B to increase their proposals even further than the August 8th Amber Energy proposal and even further than what we have been told is coming in from Bidder B, we've encouraged them to engage with Gold Reserve, with Siemens, and, you know, even beyond if they have the ability to do

From our understanding and from talking to those judgment creditors, some of the conversations have happened over the last few days. From what we can tell from talking both with -- Siemens, I think, we've had less conversations with, obviously, because they're not a bidder themselves. We've talked more with Dalinar, with Gold Reserve. From what we can tell, the conversations with Gold Reserve have not really gone anywhere for a couple of reasons. One being the competing bidders.

hesitant to provide certain confidential or sensitive information about their bids with Gold Reserve, because Gold Reserve is sponsoring its own bid. And so they're competing with each other. And then, on the other hand, the conversations have not been productive to date because Gold Reserve, as you likely saw in the letter they filed on Monday morning, is taking the position that either they get paid in full in cash on their $1.2 billion claim or, you know, they just win with their transaction.

So they really are not engaging as far as we can tell with the other bidders on taking non-cash consideration or taking some kind of a

Page 20 1 discount to the face value of their claim. And for 2 whatever it may be worth, 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 So right now, Gold Reserve is taking the position that they're not -- they're sort of 12 13 refusing to engage on anything but pure cash paid at 14 par. So I think that's probably the lay of the land 15 of the bids. 16 THE COURT: Okay. And yeah. 17 you move on, I'll just note, you may or may not have 18 seen it given everything you're doing, but Michael 19 handed me a four-page, single-space letter that Gold 20 Reserve filed sometime since my order continuing the 21 status call to Friday. So it's consistent with the 22 posture that you've just outlined from them. 23 MR. BENTLEY: Yeah. I have not read 24 They sent us an email telling us that, you know, 25 Red Tree has backed them into a corner, and now they have to send this -- submit this letter. But I guess I'm not surprised that they ended up filing it. And then, it says what it says. But I personally have not read it.

THE COURT: Got it. Okay. I didn't have any other questions about the bids. Thank you for summarizing them for me.

MR. BENTLEY: Okay. So next we will go through what we view as, you know, first the practical, you know, reality of the current schedule, which would be a sale hearing commencing this upcoming Monday, August 18th. And then, we'll go into what we view as the options because, not to bury the lead, but we think that given the updated bids and the information that has come out and the positions that parties are taking with respect to those bids and with respect to the process, we do not see how commencing the sale hearing on Monday would work practically.

And the reason being all of the briefing to date and all of the depositions and the expert testimony put forth to date has been focused on the Special Master's final recommendation from July 2nd, which is comparing a Red Tree bid that was approximately $3.8 billion in value to the judgment creditors plus a $2 billion settlement with the 2020s.

So comparing that to the $7.38 billion Dalinar transaction.

And what we have heard from parties, and I'm sure you saw exemplified in the Red Tree letter that was filed last night, parties are insisting on additional witnesses. I'm not sure that anybody has filed a letter that has suggested additional briefing yet, but we know that that's been communicated to us through numerous calls that we've been having and emails we've been having with parties over the last few days. And also, suggestions of additional depositions, for example, of the special master's witness, Mr. Hiltz, and asking about comparing the Dalinar transaction now to the Amber Energy transaction instead of to the Red Tree transaction.

So all that is to say that we believe that parties would be objecting to moving forward with the hearing on Monday. We certainly understand those positions given the change in facts that have happened. And it's unfortunate that these unsolicited competing proposals came in so close to the hearing, but that is technically permitted pursuant to the Dalinar SPA and pursuant to Your Honor's prior orders from earlier this year regarding the evaluation

Page 23 1 criteria and bid protections and process. You know, we tried to avoid this last 2 3 minute, you know, sidetracking with bids. But I think 4 that at least the good thing that came of it was that two of the bidders -- or I quess, technically one of 5 the bidders so far and potentially one more bidder, 6 7 that substantially increase the value of their bids, you know, by $2 billion plus. So that is good. 8 But the situation that it leaves us 9 10 with is that we think that conducting the hearing and 11 not permitting the additional briefing depositions and 12 proffers of experts could potentially create issues, 13 with the hearing and with treatment of the hearing. 14 So I'll pause there before I go into what we view as the two primary options for 15 16 rescheduling the hearing and ask if you have any 17 questions. 18 THE COURT: No. I'd like to hear what 19 you see as the options. 20 MR. BENTLEY: Okay. So generally 21 speaking -- and just to frame the two options at a 22 high level, we think that Option A, we'll call it, is 23 having a hearing that is delayed essentially a few 24 So we're having a hearing in earlier, mid-September. And importantly, we think that would likely be before any decision from New York -- from Judge Failla on the 2020s litigation. And then, Option B would be delaying until after a decision comes in from Judge Failla on the 2020s litigation, which again, Judge Failla indicated at that July 10th conference that the decision would be forthcoming sometime in September.

So maybe it would help if I lay out in a little bit more detail how we see the mechanics working in both option A and Option B. Again, Option A is the earlier mid-September hearing, we'll call it the pre-2020s New York ruling option. In that scenario, we would be telling bidders, both Dalinar, Amber Energy, and Bidder B, that to the extent they have revisions to their bids submitted to date, they need to make those revisions by a date certain in August.

We've been talking about dates with the sale process parties, but just didn't have enough time to settle on something to propose to Your Honor. But we are thinking that it is probably something in the neighborhood of one of the next couple of Fridays. So August 22nd or 29th. And just to be clear, this is not a re-opening of the topping period. The topping period, the Special Master was permitted to solicit bids. This is not a re-solicitation of bids.

The status quo that we have right now is we have a recommended bid, and we have two submitters of unsolicited competing proposals that we have received authority from Your Honor to engage with. And so we would not be going out broadly and asking for everybody to send an updated bid. This is not another round. It is merely giving an end date to the three parties that we're engaged with today.

And we think that the end date is important because without the end date, we could find ourselves in a similar situation where one or more of the parties just hold dry powder until the day before the sale hearing and, you know, lob in another updated bid to try and, you know, make a last-ditch effort at winning. And we think that without this end date, it'll be tough to drive parties to give their best and final that is truly a best bid, meaning they're best bid with their best foot forward.

So again, tell bidders they have to submit those final bids by a date certain in August. The Special Master would then determine if he is sticking with the existing recommended Dalinar transaction or pursuant to the Dalinar SPA has deemed that one of the other bids submitted is a "superior" proposal" under the Dalinar SPA, in which case Dalinar I think would have three business days to match that. And immediately after that match period, you either have the answer that the competing bidder is the superior proposal or Dalinar has matched it. And then the Special Master immediately files the updated recommendation.

The recommendation, we don't anticipate being the same, you know, 20-to-30-plus-page recommendation that we did last time. A lot of the case law predicates are the same regardless of which of these bids we are submitting. So we expect it to be a relatively short notice, but providing enough information as to why the Special Master is making this decision so that the parties can respond. And we would expect a very truncated briefing period, a very truncated period for any necessary depositions to follow immediately after that recommendation.

And again, that would be setting this up for a sale hearing in early-to-mid-September. One thing that I would note about the calendar for this Option A -- and I guess it comes into play with Option B as well, is there are a number of Jewish holidays that I believe begin on or around September 22nd and continue through mid-October. You know, we think that that this Option A schedule will be able to play out and a sale hearing will be able to occur before those holidays kick in on September 22nd. I just wanted to make sure that that was on your radar.

THE COURT: Thank you for that. Let me just ask you before we get to Option B. If we will end up with something looking like Option A, how much time would the Special Master anticipate building in to make his determination after the last and final date? And I'll just throw out there Option C of sticking with Monday is still on the table as of now, from my perspective. So I remain interested in if we're going forward on Monday, how soon the special master thinks he can make a determination as to whether he has a superior proposal in hand at the moment.

MR. BENTLEY: So we haven't discussed with specificity with Bob as to how long he would need to make that determination. I believe in the past we've made the determination in as quick as 48 hours. A lot of that is because we need to actually execute an SPA if Bob is going to decide that one of the other bids is superior to the Dalinar transaction.

Now, what we've told parties is that they should be essentially apples to apples with the Dalinar SPA. We should not be going backwards and going back to mark-ups submitted early in the topping period because that would not be productive, and we don't have time. So we do think that we could turn this around very quickly.

Again, we could sort of be working in parallel while parties are working on submitting their bids to prepare an updated notice. I think that if the notice is going to say that Dalinar remains, then it would be a very short notice -- sorry, Dalinar remains the recommended transaction, it would be a very short notice. And if it's a different party that's a superior proposal, then it's a -- I would say, a moderately short notice.

And your question on, you know, how that is implicated with -- or plays with Option C, which is to keep the hearing as is. If Bob, for example, were to decide today that one of these bids is a superior proposal -- first of all, I don't think that he could decide that Bidder B is a superior proposal because they still have yet to submit their bid. We've just heard from them and from others that it is coming soon.

So if you were to determine that Amber Energy is a superior proposal today, Dalinar under their SPA would have three business days to match it.

So that I think already brings us to Monday and you know, that has the effect that it does. But again,

Your Honor heard me go through what we think the 5 practical implications are just from hearing from 6 other parties regarding briefing and testimony and 7 discovery, et cetera.

THE COURT: Okay. I think I follow.

All right. Do you want to -- I don't know if you had more to say about Option A or if you're ready to move on to Option B?

MR. BENTLEY: No. I don't. I will go through the mechanics of Option B and then, you know, we're happy to answer any questions you have about the scenarios, their mechanics, the pluses, and minuses, et cetera. So on Option B, the way that we view the mechanics would be there's no change in the recommendation as of today. So as of today, Dalinar is the final recommended bid. We would not change that recommendation. And instead, the next steps would be adjournment of the sale hearing until a date to be determined after the 2020s New York decision.

Now, just for illustrative purposes, let's say the decision comes in on September 30th because Judge Failla said that it will be in by the end of September. What we would anticipate is once that decision comes in, bidders -- again, the existing bidders, because we're not having a topping period. Bidders would have a short period of time to revise their bids to reflect the implication of the 2020s decision.

Now, I think that the revising of those bids looks a little bit different than it would for Option A, which is essentially giving bidders the next week to sort it out. The reason being is depending on the 2020s decision, the bidders might have to get updated commitment letters from their financing sources just purely because by effect of the decision, the capital structure of CITGO could change.

So nevertheless, we still think that bidders could pull together those revised bids quickly. We would like to be able to go and -- you know, if Your Honor is ultimately going to tell us that you prefer Option B, I think that the process would be we would go and figure out what the parties, including with bidders, how long they would need to get their refreshed financing. We hope and expect that it is something in the neighborhood of a couple weeks. So by for example, the second week in October, you would have revised final bids that, you know,

Page 31 1 cannot move. And thereafter, again, quickly, the 2 Special Master will make a determination as to what is 3 4 the best and final bid and submit a recommendation on 5 that. We, again, would have a very truncated set of briefing and a very truncated, if necessary, 6 7 deposition and discovery schedule. And that should tee us up for a hearing in mid-October. Although, I 8 am checking my email from the Special Master. 10 that -- just to put it on your radar, the Jewish 11 holidays go through October 15th. 12 So that would probably line up anyway 13 just with, you know, revision of the bids, submission of the recommendation, short briefing. You're 14 essentially looking at a hearing that could start, you 15 16 know, the week of October 20th or 27th. 17 And again, importantly, the primary 18 distinction, I quess, I would say from a procedural 19 standpoint is that this hearing would occur after what 20 we understand is going to be a New York ruling in the 21 2020s litigation during September. 22 THE COURT: Okay. I think I 23 understand. Is there anything else you wanted to say? 24 MR. BENTLEY: No. I think that's an overview of the mechanics and what we, over the last 25

24 hours of a series of furious and consistent calls with many parties, have narrowed down as the likely options. But of course, the Special Master is willing to proceed on any basis that Your Honor would like us to, whether that's option A, B, or C. We will get it done one way or another.

THE COURT: Right. I appreciate that, of course, very much. I am not prepared at this precise moment to give you any guidance on A versus B versus C. And we can just call C everything else other than A or B to include going forward on Monday. But perhaps there's some other options as well. I would say as of now you've got the deadline of four o'clock, which I think was the deadline you had proposed in your letter maybe of this morning, if I recall correctly.

MR. BENTLEY: Yes.

THE COURT: And as you always have, the more widely you can confer and represent in that 4 p.m. status report what the views are of anybody who would be interested in A versus B versus C, the better. But I have also, you know, given an opportunity for anyone to weigh in themselves four hours later. At this point, though I recognize it's very fluid situation, it may very well be that I don't make a decision on the next steps until after seeing what I get tomorrow from you and from anyone else.

I may very well wait until I -- you know, we have the discussion that I referred to earlier scheduled for Friday. That said we really are as available as you need us to be. I won't necessarily say through the night necessarily, but, you know, till very late tonight and early tomorrow morning if there are developments or you want to take another run at -- to the extent you're asking me to decide on this call, and I'm not hearing that you are. But to the extent you are and I'm not giving you a decision, if you want to have a discussion again later that you really, in order to do your work, need to know at least whether Monday's on or off or something to that effect, you know, I'm available. We can have a further discussion.

It's also possible that we will reach out to you and say we want to have a discussion even if you haven't asked for one. But if neither of those things happen, then obviously you'll proceed according to the order, and we will get your position tomorrow. And as far as I'm certain, your position could include here's a couple of options and the Special Master is indifferent. Or here's a couple of options and the Special Master prefers whatever. So right at this very moment, I'm not deciding on the next steps. Any reaction or questions about that?

MR. BENTLEY: Yeah. My only reaction is just to let you know that when we last talked with the sale process parties, which was this morning, you know, there were two focuses I could tell from their perspective. One was are we having a hearing on Monday or not? And two was which of these divergent paths does everybody think is the better one, meaning Option A or Option B? I think that the consensus was that nobody thought that we should be going forward on Monday.

However, we are happy to confer again with the sale process parties immediately coming out of this ex parte call with you right now. And we can confirm by email that it is or is not the case that everybody thinks that they would like to know whether Monday is going to be -- there's going to be a sale hearing or not.

And then, on the latter point, I think that we can address the latter point, you know, if it's A or B or something other than a Monday hearing, I think that we're happy to meet and confer, you know, with everybody and propose in the status report due by 4 p.m. tomorrow. But we will endeavor to file it before then because I think we're just conscious of everybody's time. So I don't know if that changes Your Honor's position or what you're prepared to say now with respect to Monday or something else, but we're happy to do whatever you would like.

THE COURT: Sure, yeah. Well, let me say a few more things first I was also thinking. You know, 4 p.m. is the deadline, but particularly if there were consensus at least on Monday -- and it sounds like you sensed that there is, but I'm not prepared yet to say, because I really have to think it through, that if I got a letter even tonight that said absolutely everybody in the world agrees we don't want to come to Wilmington Monday, that I wouldn't potentially make you all come to Wilmington Monday anyway.

But that would certainly -- that would be an unprecedented thing for everyone here to agree, and I would have to consider that very seriously. So I'm not trying to deter you from that. But I just, you know, I'm not making a decision, particularly as I don't think I have that representation. It sounds like you think maybe everyone would agree don't go forward Monday. Although, actually it's now -- this is the dangers of thinking out loud. The letter from Gold Reserve I think says -- yeah. "Does not require any adjournment from the sale hearing." So you may get an objection. From at least them.

MR. BENTLEY: Yeah. What I would say is I think that we have consensus from the sale process parties, which is Crystallex, Conoco, and Venezuela as to not going forward on Monday. I would imagine that virtually all other additional judgment creditors other than Gold Reserve would say that they also agree that Monday doesn't make sense.

And if we put it to Gold Reserve, I think the way that we would have to frame it for them is we're going forward on -- the option is to go forward on Monday, whether it is with recommending you or it is with recommending a different bidder. They may change their tune on that because that would mean that they wouldn't have the ability to brief anything on the other bid and would not have the ability to depose anybody on the other bid.

So, you know, we're happy to have the broad meet and confer just to check those boxes. I don't mean it -- you know, I don't mean it in the sense of, you know, we have to go through the motions. I mean, so that we actually do get input from everybody and including Gold Reserve and put it to them in the way that I just framed it.

THE COURT: Well, let me just, you know -- and maybe Bob wants to speak to this or it's fine if you want to think about it. But if any part of me is inclined to move forward perhaps as early as next week, seems to me he is going to have to make a decision as to whether or not he has a superior bid in his hands. I don't want to eat up all the time he might need to make that decision by me not knowing what the -- setting out what the schedule is.

Is that a potential issue that, you know, maybe I need to be forced to make a decision on the schedule or maybe he can tell me how long he needs to decide if what he has now is a superior bid or not.

MR. BENTLEY: So Bob -- maybe if I could, Your Honor, just ask a clarifying question to make sure I understand it. And maybe Bob already understands it. But your question is if you take until Friday at the currently scheduled status conference to decide whether we're going forward on Monday with a sale hearing or not, the intervening time, so today, tomorrow, and Friday morning, is that enough time for Bob to decide whether he's going to continue recommending Gold Reserve or he is going to switch and recommend a superior proposal?

And the other thing I would just note, you know, before I can let Bob answer for himself. But the other thing I would note is just to remind what I mentioned earlier that Dalinar has a three-business-day right to match if Bob were to determine that there's a superior proposal. So I think that essentially would require in order to proceed early next week, we'll say, that Bob makes a decision today. So if Bob were to make a decision today, then Dalinar would have until the end of the day, end of the business day on Monday to decide whether to match.

THE COURT: Right. No. I get that.

And definitely what you just set out is part of my question, but I guess just -- I won't characterize. I don't know if this is more broadly or more concretely. If I stick to the orders that are in place right now, then it seems to me the Special Master, while there's no deadline that I'm aware of about how quickly he has to decide if he has a superior proposal or superior bid, we're on track to have a big hearing on Monday about the bid that he recommended.

And so I would think he would need to make a decision before that hearing at some point.

Page 39 And so if I'm just going to, in this context take my time, and have a hearing on Friday about whether to have a hearing on Monday; then I just guess I don't know what thoughts, if any, he has as is that the same time in which he should be doing the work to figure out if -- and I don't mean to suggest you're not working hard. Please don't misunderstand me. you know, is he in parallel doing that same work, or is he waiting for me to decide whether we're going forward Monday? I don't want to wait for him and he wait for me at the same time, and then neither of us --MR. BENTLEY: Understood. MR. PINCUS: Understood. Yeah. And let me answer this, Chase. Your Honor, we have these bids. do not include definitive SPAs. The devil is in the detail. So without understanding exactly what the terms of those agreements are, you can't even really start the discussion because there's negotiation there, too. If we don't like things that are in agreements, we need to negotiate with the parties. So I would tell you as a practical matter, if you really want a competitive situation, it's going to take a while, which in my view is going

Page 40 to be, you know, certainly a week or two at the earliest if you want us to go through --THE COURT: Right. So if I follow that correctly -- and I appreciate all that, it's not possible to make a full assessment as to whether a superior bid has been received in less than one to two weeks, which by default would mean the Special Master would have to adhere to his current recommendation, if I follow correctly, if I don't provide that amount of time? MR. PINCUS: Yeah. That is correct. And otherwise, you know, if I could even possibly change my recommendation between now and then, you'd be having a hearing on a deal that, you know, has been, you know, topped, potentially. So I don't see how next week is possible unless you want us just to stick with Gold Reserve and, you know, let people say whatever they say at the hearing. Right. Okay. THE COURT: That is helpful. Let me just throw this out because it occurred to me. I'm sure it's occurred to you all. But if under either Option A or B, and potentially some Option Cs, if time is being built in, should I even consider -- does such a person exist? Should I consider trying to find a mediator? You know, I know

Page 41 1 you guys have tried to do this in the past, but you're in the middle of everything. 2 3 I am just struck by what you said 4 earlier about, you know, Gold Reserve, they may 5 be -- you know, they're not incentivized to negotiate. 6 Is it even worth me entertaining the possibility of 7 trying to find someone new to bring into this that could potentially facilitate conversations over the 8 9 next few weeks if we are going to delay? 10 MR. BENTLEY: So, Bob, I'm happy to let 11 you give your reaction or I can start. 12 MR. PINCUS: Yeah. Look, just 13 generally, I'm not sure a mediator is helpful. We 14 need to have the full positions of these parties 15 before we can even negotiate with them. I don't think 16 a mediator gets you Gold Reserve moving to a new deal or taking a new deal. I think the pressure of having 17 18 the competitive bid that we're going to accept is the 19 only way you get there. That's my position. 20 And, Chase, I'll let you finish. 21 MR. BENTLEY: Yeah. My view is that, 22 you know, I think that the history of this situation 23 that we find ourselves in is so long and complicated 24 that the time that it would take for somebody -- you know, even a professional mediator who is, you know, skilled in getting up to speed on these situations. It would probably take them just a couple weeks or more to get up to speed on it, in which time we're probably dragging past the proposed Option A.

So the mediator I think in my mind is probably only realistic if we are in one of the longer scenarios where everybody is waiting for a 2020s decision to come down. So if the inclination is to stick with one of the faster timelines, I think that practically speaking, it'll be very difficult for a mediator to get up to speed and then to, you know, also make any progress with Gold Reserve.

And likewise, as Bob said, you know, the real leverage here, or the real incentive I should say, for Gold Reserve to come to the table and, you know, to negotiate in good faith is when they realize that we are not going forward on Monday. And instead, there is a real competing proposal out here that the Special Master is considering, and that the court has provided the additional couple weeks of runway for.

You know, and from our engagement with Gold Reserve to date, they're taking the view that certainty no longer matters. And really all that can be considered is the headline price that's delivered to the judgment creditors. And I think that the only way to deliver the message that that is not true is that there's this additional, I don't know, whatever you want to call it, two, three, four weeks for a sale hearing to happen in early to mid-September. And in that time, and frankly, you know, in less time than that, there's the chance that the Special Master changes his recommendation and deems one of these bids to be superior to the Dalinar bid.

thing, if you have any thoughts you're prepared to share, my recollection of what Judge Failla said was she intended to decide by no later than September 30th. I believe she had a large criminal trial that was starting right after the call that she had. And from press reports, I understand that trial ended maybe about a week ago. And while I did have an exparte conversation with her, I know nothing more than what I'm telling you.

You know, judges sometimes say I'll get it by September 30th, and maybe it happens sooner than that. It seems to me at least a possibility if we learn nothing further that perhaps if the special master deemed one of these other bids to be superior in part based on the 2020s, but at the same time before my hearing, Judge Failla makes a ruling, the 2020s may or may not look more or less important. I guess, I don't know if this is a question or not, but that at least is something that should be thought about.

MR. BENTLEY: Yes. It's actually a scenario that we've thought a lot about. Just to play it back in terms of some of the mechanics that we proposed or illustrative mechanics, I guess I'll say for Option A, I think we had set out that there would be revised bids, you know, in either the third or fourth week of August and then a recommendation from the Special Master immediately thereafter.

There are two options, essentially. Either the Special Master sticks with Dalinar, which does not have a 2020s transaction, and we are kind of in the position that we have been in all along, which is a recommended bid that doesn't have a 2020s transaction. And we don't know when the 2020s decision is coming. And so there's been briefing about termination rights and whatnot. But the scenarios and the possible implications of that decision, you know, are what they always have been.

The bonds could be valid. The bonds could be not valid. And on the valid side, you know, there are also multiple iterations of a decision that the bonds are valid. Either they can enforce immediately or they are subject to a stay, whether from the New York Court itself or from OFAC. And then, you know, there's also the complication of the 2020s seeking a preliminary junction if they succeed in New York.

So I think that all of those scenarios are the same that we're facing today. If the recommendation under Option A is to stick with Dalinar. If the recommendation under Option A is that -- we'll just say Amber Energy for an example. If Amber Energy is the superior proposal, as I previewed earlier the settlement, the support agreement that they have with the 2020s contemplates the 2020s going to Judge Failla and seeking a stay of that action, which would -- if she grants it, the effect would be that she wouldn't enter her order.

Now, it may be too late, for example, even if, you know, bids are due August 22nd and we submit a recommendation a couple days later. And then, you know, you're on just to use a concrete date as an illustration, you're looking at let's say August 26th, the 2020s move to stay. But Judge Failla says, you know, "I was planning on issuing my order today, and here you go. Here it is." And she dockets it.

Page 46 That does not change that the recommended bid was one with the 2020s deal. doesn't change that there is briefing concurrently going on with respect to that Amber Energy deal with the transaction with the 2020s deal. But I think that the scenario that you are flagging and are, you know, potentially concerned about is a decision that the 2020s are not valid. And here we are, we've recommended a transaction that has a deal with the 2020s that pays them, you know, roughly Notwithstanding the fact that after that settlement was struck, the bonds have been deemed invalid.

questions, but suffice it to say we've spent a lot of time thinking about the different options.

THE COURT: Great. Yeah. I'm glad and not surprised that you have. Thank you for that. I think my only further thoughts subject to anything else you might want to ask me or discuss, it seems that it may be worthwhile if you all focus, you know, as soon as I let you go, on if there is consensus on let's not have an evidentiary hearing on Monday, Tuesday, and/or Wednesday of next week.

You know, perhaps, you know, if you're in a position to report something like that, you know, even later today, I could potentially be in a position where, you know, I could at least make clear we don't need all the witnesses and potentially we don't need all the lawyers even to be sticking to their travel plans to get to Wilmington.

What I mean to say, concretely, is even if you don't get consensus or don't even know the positions of everybody on the next steps, full stop, Option A versus B versus C, if we can pull out this piece of, "Okay. What about Monday?" You know, and I was in a position to know everybody's position, "Okay. What about Monday though, at least?" Are we all in agreement that we don't want to have an evidentiary hearing on Monday about Gold Reserve? Well then, you know, perhaps I could get you an answer on that piece of the schedule fairly quickly. But as always, you know, you use your best judgment as to what to do. But that's a thought.

MR. BENTLEY: Yeah. I don't want to get ahead of Bob. I think that my initial reaction is that the parties would appreciate that clarity for Monday. And we can certainly go ahead and I think that everybody is waiting for an update from us. So I'm sure they're standing by and ready to get on a phone call as soon as we request it.

My question for you, Your Honor, is whether you would like us to send you an email that says this is what the outcome was of that call, or if you would like us to file a letter that says this is the outcome of that call.

to slow you down very much, it's best to have things in the formal record as much as possible. So, I mean, there's good reason for why we're now having our second ex parte call this week, and you'll make the appropriate record that this has occurred. And I'm comfortable that I have every interested party's consent to this. And I cannot think of any way I could possibly manage my role as a neutral judicial decision maker in this complex case without having access occasionally as needed to these ex parte calls.

All that said, it's unusual as you as a litigator know. And so if it's not going to slow you down much to write a short letter, put it in the docket, make it public, that is preferable to the email.

MR. BENTLEY: I'm sure that is not any burden at all. We can pull together a letter quickly and file it on the docket. And also, Michael and I, exchanged emails this morning about the notice of ex parte. Our intention is to file the notice this afternoon and just combine and make reference to both the ex parte on Monday and today's ex parte. And of course, when we get on the phone with parties this afternoon to talk about Monday, we'll note that we had another ex parte today.

THE COURT: Of course. That all sounds great. And I reiterate, as I said in an email to you and I think said on this call, we, Michael and I, are available. So I'm not saying you can't use email and certainly if you need to reach us with any urgency in not normal business hours, you're going to have to use email or text or call, and we'll be as responsive as we can be. And anything else from your end at this point with me?

MR. BENTLEY: No. No. And I think that we should assume that there's virtually no way that we will be able to get a letter or even an email prior to business hours concluding today. So I think what we'll do is we'll plan on filing the letter. And then, once the letter hits the docket to make sure that, Your Honor, you see that it hit the docket, we can send it by email to you so that you have it on your court email on your phone. And you can see the outcome of the meet and confer.

I probably should have made clear in my email, even though I have access to my email, I don't get automatic notice as I think you do when something is filed in a case. So for better or worse, I see at midnight every night a collection of everything that was filed in all my cases. And much more often than not, I'm up at midnight to look at that email. But it means, I don't know what happened at five o'clock or at eight o'clock until midnight.

So yeah. If you file something after five o'clock but before midnight sending me an email and copying me on it will make sure that Michael and I

1	both see it. So thank you for that.
2	MR. BENTLEY: Yes. Will do.
